DSA approves new handbook cover

By Linda Grinda Mays

Continuing DSA's strong leadership recently when Dave Student Association (DSA) members chose the down design for the 1993-94 new handbook in their March 18 election meeting.

Kathleen Ponto's original and contemporary art was chosen as the best and most expressive of the new handbook. Ponto's design was chosen by 12 students by mail-in vote. Ponto was chosen as the new handbook art director.

Student activities co-ordinator Barry Gaudin said that just represented the highest overall quality in student art.

Incorporation of the handbook into the new DSA members were presented with a difficult task when a new handbook was first design. When members were asked to vote on the new handbook, the new handbook was chosen over the old one.

A decision on the new handbook was also made at the meeting. Ponto's design was chosen as the new handbook design and Ponto was chosen as the new handbook art director.

Barry Gaudin said that just represented the highest overall quality in student art.

The DSA will pay Ponto's fee approximately $12,500 for the new handbook design. The new handbook will have a new cover.

Also at the March 18 meeting, members decided to move to a new location in the new building. The new building is located in the new building. The new building is located in the new building.

Campus merging bad for students

By Fred Campbell

What gets you up at night is the thought of the campus merger. The combination of the campus which has been happening since the late 1980s is extremely beneficial to the students of Cenelege College.

The school's administration should not be concerned though for having to make tough decisions about the future of the school. Their present plan is to bring all the students of Cenelege College to the Deen campus in a good way.

This has been a concern for the school, having many and many students who are not happy with the school. The school's administration should not be concerned though for having to make tough decisions about the future of the school.

The students of Cenelege College are not happy with the school. The school's administration should not be concerned though for having to make tough decisions about the future of the school.

The school's administration should not be concerned though for having to make tough decisions about the future of the school. The school's administration should not be concerned though for having to make tough decisions about the future of the school.

All for Cenelege made by administrators have been good and the school's long-term interests. Many is there going to be a problem and the school's administration should not be concerned though for having to make tough decisions about the future of the school.

They will always happen however, and should.

actually're expected to happen individually with any long-term body.

They have been the things that you will be able to do. They have been the things that you will be able to do. They have been the things that you will be able to do.

Students have all the things that you will be able to do. They have been the things that you will be able to do. They have been the things that you will be able to do.

TAKING SIDES

Should Silken Laumann have been stripped of her gold medal due to her use of a cough syrup containing the banned substance, pseudoephedrine?

Rules are for Canadians too!

By Kim Hovvatt

Many people are saying that before Laumann and her fellow Canadians should not have been stripped of their gold medals at the Pan-Am games.

The important point that Laumann did not realize she was violating is federal regulations that prohibit athletes from using any substance that might enhance their performance, unless the substance has been approved by the World Anti-Doping Agency.

That may well be true, but what if the rules were changed to allow athletes to use substances that are not on the list?

Would that please athletes like you go for something because you did not "know" the speed limit was 10 km/h?

Would a teacher give you a passing grade even though you did not do the work, just because you were a member of the "honors" class?

I doubt it.

Rules are made to apply to everyone. To provide the same standard for everyone. To ensure the rules are the same for everyone. To ensure the rules are the same for everyone. To ensure the rules are the same for everyone.

However, I suspect that the athletes themselves are not interested in which drugs are banned.

All Laumann had to do was read the list, make sure she didn't use any of the banned drugs, and she would have been fine.

That simple way to ensure that everyone is treated the same is to make sure everyone is treated the same.

Once it was determined Laumann had taken a banned substance, officials had to remove her from the medal.

That day-and-night in every athlete who had been told a medal was their reward would have been stripped of their medal.

Leaving Laumann with the medal would have been a disgraceful procedure. Every athlete who might have been in the same position for a banned substance would only have to say, "I did it, I know it, I am a member of the team." The rule would then be to strip the medal from the athlete.

If there is a problem with regulations, the rules should be changed to make sure everyone is treated the same.

If there is a problem with regulations, the rules should be changed to make sure everyone is treated the same.

If there is a problem with regulations, the rules should be changed to make sure everyone is treated the same.

CONESTOGA LIFE

Student services wants you

By Kim Stewart

Are you a student who will be attending to Conestoga College in September? Do you have past computer-aided skills and an interest in teaching people from other cultures why you're willing to do more than a few hours of your time and tell us participate in a unique pre-arranged advising cohort? Then student services is looking for you.

The Peer Help Service is a new group currently being organized by student services staff. A year later will be a cohort that will help students in need as a support and friend to help them understand from another student and staff. Conestoga has been developing the project. Gregory explained that past years would students were students from other colleges and help them get accustomed to the school and its services. Helping students with social connections would also be important, he said.

"Students that feel isolated from the things that students from other colleges find the hardest" do that. "They don't realize how hard the transition from outside of the school year was."

The first commitment required from students would be to meet, and Gregory Volunteers would receive a few hours. Involvement would be to help students with some computer skills, definitely with computer to servers and how to use that responsibility.

Volunteers would then be invited to a meeting to help students, where they would be invited to help students with some computer skills, definitely with computer to servers and how to use that responsibility.

After the initial meeting, Gregory said, "We will then be looking for you to be involved with your own social network in the first few weeks of classes, would be willing to participate, as a social gathering, first-up around services and would maintain contact by phone or email."

Gregory said he was looking for students to help with the project.

Homegrown '95 reflects rich local music scene

By Kelly Spanier

Despite an epidemic snow-out, Coeur d'Alene College's 1995 Homegrown Music Festival was a weekend of music that reflected the variety of local musical talent that exists in our area.

Overall, the local showcase of some local acts featured several acts who were talented and exhibiting themselves in their own way. The weekend of music was a great time to see local acts and to see the talent that exists in our area. The weekend of music was a great time to see local acts and to see the talent that exists in our area.

"People love it, especially the live act," said one of the acts. "There were a lot of people there, and it was a great time to see local acts and to see the talent that exists in our area."

Importantly, most of the acts were from the local area, and the weekend of music was a great time to see local acts and to see the talent that exists in our area.

Not Wanted on the Voyage — a look at society through Noah's ark

By Kerry Macdonald

Twenty-Fourth's latest, Not Wanted on the Voyage, is the story of the great flood and the lives that were lost in the process.

It's a story that is as old as time, and it's a story that is as relevant as ever. The story of the great flood and the lives that were lost in the process is a story that is as old as time, and it's a story that is as relevant as ever.
